

THREE VOICES OF CONTEMPORARY LATIN-AMERICAN POETRY

Lucía González and Luciana di Leone

Núcleo Poesía (Laboratório da Palavra – PACC – UFRJ)

Colaborators: Estela Rosa, Taís Bravo, Claudia Sampaio, Juliana Assis, Núcleo Tradução (Laboratório da Palavra – PACC – UFRJ)

It is always difficult to do an anthology. A narrow cut-off can never account for heterogeneous poetic experiences. From the small space of this anthology - selected, presented, constructed and translated collaboratively by Laboratório da Palavra (PACC.UFRJ) - we intended to maintain and deepen this diversity of dictions without fulfilling the need of representing a geographical diversity. In Latin America, that tends to separate Brasil from Caribbean, or Caribbean from the Southern Cone, the Southern Cone of Latin America from the Mexican Gulf, the challenge was to put those spaces both in contact and in conflict so that it was possible, at the same time, to show diverse poetic voices and, more, voices concealed by inequality. For this reason, we present here three young female Latin-American poets and from each of their poems, and in very different ways, Valeska Torres, Minerva Reynosa and Rita Indiana situate us in very different spaces, both geographical and discursive: the periphery of Rio de Janeiro, the frontier of Mexico and the United States and the streets of Dominican Republic, the ways of inhabiting this island.

Valeska is from Rio de Janeiro and the periphery that is drawn in her poems is made of smells, of animals and of non solving calculations. The periphery is geographical: the favela, Caxias-Méier, but also it is what gets marked in the body and that stays out. The periphery shovels Rio de Janeiro instead of expanding it and lets their most profound cavities uncovered, cavities that open up from the coup that appears in Valeska's poems as a way to originate the world and Rio de Janeiro, a coup that repeats indefinitely and that perpetuates the holes as the bodies that inhabit them.

Minerva Reynosa is Mexican, more specifically from Monterrey, a state in the northern of Mexico in the frontier of the United States. In her poems the periphery appears as this space that is at the same time a periphery and a boundary. It also plays - even with the form - with the possibility of escaping. The first poem by Minerva is a block, closed in its four sides. The periphery which Minerva talks about is in the center of this block and it seems, at the same time, an attracting and repelling center. We get to this periphery through the house, the bed and the couple's problems. Even though this center, this periphery and suburbs denies itself as a vanishing point when tracing again the way to this also closed feminine body: there are no kids, there is no menstruation.

But, Minerva's Monterrey extends through the form of the poem until it touches another space, the frontier, where what is named seems to be exactly this instance of liminality: the passport, the cerberus, another language. The space seems to open up and it is not the bed anymore, not even the second floor, nor the interior of the female body, but there is also no possible escaping. The poem inscribes itself in this limbo, far south of the United States and to the north of Mexico, where language - this accented English - and the subject disfigures themselves.

In Rita's poems, the city is full of crazy people and a body that is only named when it is interpellated. It is a body that acts: cleans, takes care of the backyards, organizes what is from others. But, besides that, the voice of the body repeats and deviates from the possibility of identity. With Rita it also appears an island: coconut, hurricanes, beauty contests, Caribbean clichés, a dream beach and Trujillo. It appears a voice that is a body and is a city that assembles and disassembles, being at once a very particular and a nobody's thing. The history of Dominican Republic and the everyday life of the bodies that emerge from Rita's poems successively named creating an impossible testimony in which no one gets close to listen.

The periphery that is drawn in the course of these three poets work is not, or is not only, a geographical periphery. It is a periphery's voice that transits over the language in an alternative way, forcing it to say what is normally not said. The alternative experience of periphery, in a city that is at war against the poor, in an island, in a frontier, it is also an experience of the body and the voice. A voice that rises, in its difference, and emancipates itself.

Translation: Juliana de Assis

VALESKA TORRES (BRASIL)

In a galaxy far far away...

light-years ago there was a black hole so black and deep that it's confounded with disposals up in the slums digging

one more grave of a rogue translation: Núcleo de Tradução

Pissed

the stopper blows out against my forehead in light beige panties piss running down between my legs the yellow metallic liquid: a dirty woman. in secret tries, i stick my fingers between the throat when i, would stick them between the lips of my pussy if i was allowed to cum, if i was allowed to a bunch of banana with granola, it bursts my pants zipper when i gobble a banana bunch with granola eating banana (silently so that no one hears my tongue soaked in saliva) i am ashamed of being a dirty woman that likes eating bananas around chewing silently doing a pap underneath the tongue i do not want any one to see me any one to listen to me eating at the frayed seat of caxias x méier nor that any one ask me why do i pee my pants when a stopper blows out against my forehead

i don't want any one to see my hair underneath the armpit that i shave everydayeverydayeveryday i shave my armpit hair without any rite without any failure i clean the ugly and dirty hair of the dirty woman i am.

translation: Juliana de Assis

Herd

Six o'clock in the afternoon, a sow going to slaughter, a crowd of pigs.
Uniform: gray and blue, Brazilian flag, public educational unity. a well-dressed sow.
Educational public system and a herd of black pigs trying to learn that Jesus has blue eyes he is a whitey, when tanned has to use water paste.
Educational public system what is the use of knowing how to count, if in the end of the month there is nothing left for the sow that works to pay bills? To sustain a home?
End of a day of work, beginning of a night of grazing the belly next the stove a shotgun with still warm barrel i put the bullet right on the face of the douchebag i live up to my wage.

translation: Juliana de Assis

MINERVA REYNOSA (MÉXICO)

another space dynamics the border with another chico with another habit at cerberus the ship groping through the prairie hill intergalactic young men of light sun incandescent wet back my passport I pass by the mount long the distance with another name another space another subject: who stay in the Grass disfigured

(trad. Vinícius Fialho) on the second floor in bed the problem with my ex-boyfriend should be sacred I think about you laughing in a weirdextravagant/garish way in the end with the present of some time together I think I cry on the kitchen floor warming on the pla-nets jamaica spain geographic enlargement to think mountain I think oh lord how would we be now would we love the sofa the lips the passport and then the lovers others hidden from the addicted lovers towards the future the kidnap neither drowsiness nor scream the pavement tessitura trinities trots north peripheries suburbs I cry keloid I think lying down bruised arm burnished gold pray bath relief scabies encephalogram volitional treatment I anonymous mouth anima next to my ex-boyfriend I unable to enjoy the acquitted girl with the red limb adulterated devising the grunt colored juice scarlet colored the sky meekness the girl not the violet cloud violet in parts bipartite exfoliating the matrix with no cervix the childless matrix the matrix burnished in strikes locked altered I thrown on the floor trans-presentiment the skin the girl the violet one how would we be now and I think about you without screams nor dog nor sun without menstruating yet translation: Vinícius Fialho

RITA INDIANA (REPÚBLICA DOMINICANA)

In name

to me without names

without birthdays

without genetically manipulated chicken

without a kitchen to fix me a coffee

without name

without golden

I

am the one that waits for my brothers under a three-colored coverlet

that isn't the country

it's another alcoholic thing

by the waste and the Discovery Channel

I

am the fervent Toño admire

the star of the dogs that flutter like cannibals garbage butterflies the one that plays with the maticueros, without any shame sonofabitch

that it's not me

the one that sees the quartered city still needs

your old names

how can no one have seen them yet?

why no one rises the phone?

the secretel is the mark of the beast

Come on please

free me from this cut face island

that don't remember its abortions

I return being me

the childhood of a cybernetic kitty

the small dirt of a soft catholicism

betting my luck

on the caribbean sky's heart the last hurricane that will come through all the doors the hurricane that is a metallic spider with eight golden shovels I hold it in my hand
and my hand is the island
and, as always,
it's so pretty

(trad. Giulia Benincasa)

Testimony

I am the only one that has seen the embryo of the apocalypse at the head of the bridge like a graffiti represents me has anointed me and disordered me buried the fluorescent sword baptized with dead steel I'm your mommy flight attendant beauty queen of the passion of one christ the king the notion of the deepest leisure the skinny gum-chewer stork the flatfoot strategist the one I am and will be para siempre jamás the mortality infected by contests televised, carnivals of the third world searching for the truth in the capital's nobles' sewage in the little paws of wealthy cockroaches of beauty parlours finding myself in the night solemnly dismantled the joints broken from knocking on doors and the cranes' borders that raise phalluses of the city up to the sky the prophecy has announced that I would come to fight the carcoma of weekly fat and tombstones like suns that pull down people's heads like fruits hammering the street dogs those that are my domain filthy like the marquises of naco knew about my arrival it's been centuries I am the mother tramps on the trijulist's unconscious my offspring I'm the one that sticks the finger on the wound I'm the open wound since the seventies in the white face of Ciudad Trujillo I'm the stuffed beast I'm the plastic bag and the worm that searches I'm the lonely flamboyant that welcomes the ones in need macho men who bottom for soft drinks

this is the truth I'm the candle that opens the way the bad bitch standing on four cement legs the woman I will never be I'm something pretty much of my own is it possible that no one understands this solitude?
Come on bury all of me on the road Where a thousand pale fungi will cover my buttocks handeared by magic this magic mother of children that like me roam in the dominican night rarefied by drugs that poo expels in the full moon

come on
eat from my body before time comes bringing it's gillette that is a grave count for me the brats that would come after me looking with their little eyes a faded photograph of my present glory in pampers Come on
bring perfume fever eskimo i have it housed in the flesh of my mirror
The city will ride in my back and we will be as one thing pretty much of my own Golden holy barbara Golden sweet puta
Golden luck's Knorr car Golden fate of the dead Golden and holy don Manuel del Cabral, mad walking naked chasing a verse let's cry like I would do in this case and a prayer after and a vision after san Michael Jordan flying through Del Ensache air

Ozama

Come see me come running the little motorcycles sabotaging all the luck dices the malice's speed of a man of the mangrove

I'm the star of the unveiled dogs the magnified Cibao like a storage that stores stones to be eaten the south only one dog accent the east a desert of dead people cooked in a diamond-shaped pan everything under the howl of the dog-man a mutant that hires in his pockets evil fleas

the death with teeth bone-rodent raging death que nosotros seremos para siempre jamás the dog-man calculates his own weight looking at the obelisk the lots of cardboard in his back anticipating the garden's apocalypse that is also a invention of my own because all that is over this big city is mine

I gave it all a name it was all puppets of the dominican radiotelevision missing dominican in a vickiana's show beauty contests' loser idiot number eight desired in the blaguerista sunday bitch old

bitch

pour golden

drool

I

come to me the power of a xangô that is now a Pokémon

to me without names

without birthdays

without genetically manipulated chicken

without a kitchen to fix me a coffee

without name

without golden

I

am the one that waits for my brothers under a three-colored coverlet

that isn't the country

it's another alcoholic thing

by the waste and the Discovery Channel

I

am the fervent Toño admire
the star of the dogs that flutter like
cannibals garbage butterflies the one that plays with the matacueros, without any shame sonofabitch
that it's not me
the one that sees the quartered city still needs
your old names
how can no one have seen them yet?
why no one rises the phone?
the secretel is the mark of the beast
Come on please
free me from this cut face island
that don't remember its abortions
I return being me
the childhood of a cybernetic kitty
the small dirt of a soft catholicism
betting my luck
on the caribbean sky's heart
the last hurricane
that will come through all the doors
the hurricane
that is a metallic spider
with eight golden shovels
I hold it in my hand

and my hand is the island
and, as always,
it's so pretty

translation: Giulia Benincasa

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial 4.0 International License.

<http://www.revistaperiferias.org>